Did the "Marne Productions, Inc., now the Salvation Army was going to have a drive for funds, and did it decide to stage a musical comedy to boom the good work? Or is it just a coincidence a pan of doughnuts was made the e de resistance of the feast of music and mirth and high kicking served at the

Nora Bayes Theatre last night on the eve of that same drive? Anyhow they were nice looking doughnuts, and com-bined with the pretty Salvation Army lasses who purveyed them and the solin gauze skirts and the music and Harry Tighe, and so on and so on, they ought to do a lot to help the money roll into Commander Evangeline Booth's coffers. Maybe some of the numbers that were sung last last night wouldn't just fit into a. Salvation Army meeting, but the assess who capered about the stage in the well known un form would grace any S. A. affair that was ever held. Of course, as may be guessed, the pro duction has to do with the late war. The two acts are staged in an Alsatian village, and there is a mess corps pre-sided over by the ever popular and entertaining Harry Tighe, who as Mess Sergeant Doulittle was easily the best thing in the play. As every one knows there can't be too much of a good thing, and so the public may be glad to know that Harry overflowed his uniform just the same as he has his other costume The three chins that divided his beaming and his military collar testified his alleged worries as mess sergeant hadn't brought that slenderness for which he confessed that he longed

But Kalidasa, as even the policeman in Sheridan square can tell you, takes this much precedence over the Bard of Avon, that he wrote his play 1,500 years ago—and it has not yet been turned into a musical comedy. The play centres about Shakuntala, daughter of a wood nymph and the priestly Father Kanwa, who performs a pricetess's duties in looking after a sacred grove, watering the trees, and acting as a reception committee for visiting deities. King Dushyanta, on a huntrip, wanders into the forest, falls in love with the maid of the grotto and promptly marries her out of hand, in that pleasantly informal way, without benefit of ciergy, that is perfectly legitimate in fairyiand. The piece seems also rather naive, but then Kalidasa wasn't writing for a modern audience. Certainly is has more body than "The Tents of the Arabs." for this Oriental fantasy, besides having a really hackneyed theme, at times became too dreamy for words. The company yesterday played it with a dignified tempo, preserving the poetic feeling admirably without drowning the drama in it. The costumes and settlings with the aid of the foodilghts. Joseph Macaulay Cannot Understudy Destiny.

On hearing this proposition expounded

the audience prepared to curl up in their seats, luiled by the familiar strain, and let the evening slip away into Nirvana. But right away Mr. Hobart started to prove his moral which was that no man can understudy destiny, because too many things are liable to happen. Right away practically everything possible that ever happened to a young man virtually fell upon "Come-on" Charley Carter. The spectators began to lose control of themselves as soon as Pansy and Panatella, doing a sister act in vaudeville, came on and gave a sample of their sketch in order to win Charley over as their angel with part of that $10,000, which he commences handing out to which he commences handing out to everybody who can show him they need it more than he does. The act is actually booked for a New York temple of vaudeville, the agent saying it's so "rotten it'll surely be a big hit."

And instead of throwing his money way by his seemingly follish experience. away by his seemingly foolish generos-ity the young clerk actually begins haul-ing it in like a Liberty Loan. It almost snows him under like the flood of shee boxes he lets loose in the first act. In fact this is a highly ludicrous satire on the plays in which the heroes rake in the plays in which the heroes rake in all the money not in the mint simply by the application of the stage's curefre business methods—the only question be-ing why the playwrights don't apply these methods themselves. Priceless Ruby Caught on Fly.

"A Good Bad Woman," was enough to make nervous souls uneasy. Then there were other incidents that made Mr. Bennett's participation in the occasion more or less of a comfort. The theme of the new drama is a practice forbidden by the law of state and church. With the name of Mr. Bennett, who through his long experience with "Damaged Goods" became almost a household word in certain parts of the country in plain view, there was the feeling that education was go. HIGH FUR PRICES ARE MAINTAINED

Sales Reach $1,000,000 on Second Day of Auction Here.

High prices prevailed again yesterday at the spring auction sale of raw pelts of the New York Fur Auction Sales Corporation being held this week in Masonic Temple, Twenty-third street. Included in the offerings were 17,000 squirrel, 2,334 lynx, 12,815 gray fox, 295 white fox, 608 cross fox, 22,444 red fox, 7,800 fox tails 28,533 Australian opossum, 24 chinchilla and also about 100 silver fox carried over from Monday. The total sales for the day were about

The official average prices as compared ith the midwinter sale were as follows French black silver fox, 15 per cent advance: fresh clear silver fox, 10 per cent. advance; medium and low silver fox, 50 per cent. advance; squirrel, 20 per cent. advance; lynx, 10 per cent. advance; gray fox, 15 per cent. advance; change; cross fox, 10 per white fox, no change; cross fox, 10 per cent. advance; red fox, 10 per cent. advance; Australian opossum, 35 per cent. advance, and rhutali opossum, 25 per cent. advance.

Squirrel sold from 6 cents a skin to $1.02, but the offering was comparatively small and the pells were said to be of an inferior quality. Cross fox sold up to $169. The lowest price paid for this skin was $14. The chinchilla offering. while it brought satisfactory prices, was considered too small to be of great im-portance, only 24 skins being sold. Some of the other prices realized yesterday were lynx, $10.25 to $40: gray fox, $3.10 to $450; white fox, $20 to $56: red fox, $7.50 to $55: Australian opossum, $155 to $370; ringtail opossum, 35 cents to $1.25.

Offerings for to-day include 7,558 Chinese weasel, 1.518 Chinese raccoon, 15,39% wild cat, 3,656 ringtail cat, 971 otter, 6,187 sundry fox, 28,189 Australian fox, 28,189 wolf, 226,509 American quos-sum and lots of sundries. Marten, which was scheduled to be sold yesterday, will be the first article sold to-day. Due to its widespread use as a summer fur prices are expected to go 50 per cent, over January levels.

Knit Goods Market Improves.

"Slow but steady improvement is shown in knit goods," reports the Na-tional Association of Hosiery and Under-wear Manufacturers. "Buying has been stimulated to some extent by the fact that the closing down of many mills and the operating of many others on part time threatens a scarcity in some limes.

"Jobbers manifest more confidence as it becomes apparent that business among retailers now is at approximately normal. The consumer has been inclined to wait in expectation of lower prices, which do not seem probable, in view of the shortening of the work day and the practical certainty that present wage levels will be maintained. "There is a good demand for novelties and specialties, notably in sweater coats, and in these garments, as in hosiery, the trend is toward the high colors."

Just as Much in Fall

HICAGO, April 8.—No decrease in the prices of medium and better grade clothing and possibly a moderate reduction in lower grades containing reworked wool (shoddy) and cotton—that is the prospect for the fall and winter of 1919.

setive, and in spots it is reported that manufacturers have had some difficulty in maintaining their supplies of the most favored colorings. Further indications that velvets are to be used extensively for wraps and cloaks for fall has resulted in a good demand for this type of fabric from garment manufacturers. The sales for the spring season were not ended when buyers began operating for fall and they have continued buying without intermission since.

Velveteens are wanted by some cutters, who report a steadily increasing demand for them for spring. Buyers preparing for fall are taking a large yardage of corduroy, not only of white but of various shades of brown and some black, with blues also wanted in considerable volume. Plush fabrics continue to increase in popularity, it is said, buyers generally displaying considerable interest in the varieties made in imitation of furs.
